

I believe that the loss of code requirements and the general relaxation of the rules have help sell equipment but has not improved the quality of life for the existing operators. Those with time spent learning seem to respect and appreciate their license. If an individual is not willing to invest in the time and make an effort to learn and earn his upgrade, then that person is not eligible to be upgraded! I just hope you add the code requirement back the way it was for many years. We don't need any more CB's added to the bands. Thank you.
